

I want to start establishing the primary focus of this apology. I'm sure you wouldn't want it to be super formal so it won't.

Zee, I beg you from my whole heart to accept this apology. Genuinely, all I wanted was to be seen and loved, I never wanted to attack or treat you badly. I never meant it to make you feel like that Zee. Blaming you for my depression is wrong and I did not mean it, I was just upset at that moment and said something I regret. I'm sorry for that Zee. Mommy I'm sorry seriously, I didn't mean it, my actions are bad and I want to fix them. I care about you alot, I care so much about you. I don't blame you for my hurt. I feel like shit for breaking your trust and disrespecting you, especially after everything you do for me. You're so precious to me and I see everything you do for me my Queen, you have your own way of doing things and I respect you. You've given me so many chances and tried your best to guide me, and I turned around and lashed out. I really hate that I did that to you. I'm not saying this to sound like the perfect sub right now, I'm far from that I know. I'm saying it because I actually regret it. I don't want to be that person who dumps my pain onto you like that. I still want to belong to you, but I also need to get better at handling my emotions without blaming you. I'm so sincerely sorry, Zee.

I'll take whatever you decide, punishment, space, whatever. Just tell me what you need from me right now. I'm open to learning and growing on how I can communicate my struggles without it turning like this again. I trust you and my submission and devotion to you will never waver. Please don't give up on us

