

My Dreams In A Relationship

By: Zee's Pet

To: My Owner

I have spent a long time dreaming about what I truly want in a relationship. Not just the fantasies and kink, but the lifelong connection and bond that is built on trust, love, and communication. When I think of a relationship, I think of completely submitting myself to my partner and giving her everything I have to offer. Romance, being the clingy and needy partner, obedience and devotion are important factors to me.

My biggest dream is to belong to someone who is dominant, strong, caring, loving, and fair. I want a life where I wake up every morning and express how much I love being owned, how much I appreciate her, and kneel at her feet. I dream of making her coffee, her breakfast, setting up her shower, and kneeling in front of the door for her to return. I dream of a love where I don't have to guess what she wants, because she tells me clearly and firmly what she expects of me, and I obey with love, devotion, and happiness. I want to be at her service 24/7. I want to be useful to her, making her life easier and happier, whether it's through my actions, effort, and words, or simply resting at her feet when we are together.

I dream of a relationship where I can be my whole self, clingy, needy, and always wanting attention without having to feel like a burden. I want a partner who can be gentle, strict, and soft. I dream of a day where I can be turned on by just a word, or made to cry by just a word, or made to laugh by just a word. I want to be her partner in every essence of the word. I want to give myself completely and utterly and make her feel special and powerful for owning me. I want others to be envious of the attention and love I give her, both in public and at home. I dream of being a safe space for her, where she doesn't feel stressed, down, or judged. I dream of kneeling at her feet, hugging her, and jumping up and down with excitement when she returns. I dream of serving her a home cooked meal, just the way she likes it, and asking for her permission to eat, sit, or even speak. I dream of us discussing how our days went at work, the show we are watching together, and flirting and teasing about when I will be unlocked or how much we love each other. I want to be the person who reminds her every day of how much she is loved, safe, and completely my Owner.

In my dream relationship, love is not separate from kink. They are interconnected. I want to be locked and desperate for her because it is just one more way to show her that my body isn't mine anymore. I want there to be rules, rituals, punishments, denials, and aftercare. I dream of a dynamic where, from the moment I wake up at the exact time she instructs me to, I start my morning ritual for her: I kiss her feet, kneel, make her coffee, and express how much I love and appreciate her for owning me. I dream of getting ready for work together in the morning, complimenting each other on how good we look, laughing and joking with each other, showing genuine love and care.

I dream of ritualistic romance, where I massage her whole body with candles all around that smell wonderful. I dream of asking her for permission, kneeling at her feet, and feeling excited for when she comes home. I dream of giving her my virginity in the most romantic way possible. I dream of moments of peace, serenity, and love, the moments she calls me "My Good Boy" in a soft and loving way, or laughs at one of my silly messages, or simply lets me rest my head on her lap while she plays with my hair.